

Template: Planning for Orientation

When planning for positive orientation it is important to reflect on the purpose of your orientation practices; what information are you trying to share or receive? Once you have identified the purpose, it will be easier to determine what type[s] of support and tools are required.

Steps to a successful orientation	Service Perspective: What do I need to consider?	Child and Family Perspectives: What do I need to consider?	Action Plan: What actions do I need to implement?
Negotiate a time and day for the family to begin their orientation
Determining the best communication approach for each family

Template: Planning for Orientation

Steps to a successful orientation	Service Perspective: What do I need to consider?	Child and Family Perspectives: What do I need to consider?	Action Plan: What actions do I need to implement?
Orientation and Transition social scripts for children
Orientation and Transition social scripts for families

Template: Planning for Orientation

Steps to a successful orientation	Service Perspective: What do I need to consider?	Child and Family Perspectives: What do I need to consider?	Action Plan: What actions do I need to implement?
Gather important information
Handover / information sharing with families about learning			